(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 7.—The second annual Horse Show of the Cameron Run Hunt Club will take place on the club grounds near Braddock Heights, on Wednesday and Thursday, May 11th and 12th. From the present outlook the show should be a great success, as the entries both in quality and number far exceed those of any Hunt Club show in the country.

Two hundred and twenty-five entries are well distributed throughout the twenty-two classes. The class for hunters owned and ridden by members of the Cameron Run Hunt Club, containing alone 18 entries.

Among the prominent exhibitors from a distance are Mr. A. H. Higginson, of Middlesex, Mass., who is showing his pack of hounds and several good hunters; Mr. Clarence Moore, of F. H. Chevy Chase Hunt, Washington, D. C., who has also entered his hounds and the well known show ring performers Kohnhor, Craven, Masterpiece, Thunder, etc., and several good harness horses, Miss Field and Miss Elkins, of Washington, and Miss Wadsworth, of Genesee, N. Y., have entered their good hunters in several classes. Virginia is well represented. Messrs. C. W. Smith and John Carter, of Warrington; L. Gibson and Luttrell, of Delaplaine; Rogers Bros., of Loudon county; A. O. and P. V. Porter, of Manassas; Henry H. Hooper, Stuart and S. Cooper Dawson, of Fairfax county and the Hampton Stock Farm.

The Cameron Run Hunt will also be prominent in the Hunt Team and Hound classes.

The main feature of interest on the second day will be a steeplechase, to be ridden by members of recognized Hunt Clubs, about two and one-half miles over the new Hunt Club Course, which is adjoining the show grounds. This steeplechase will be made a semi-annual affair, and in the autumn two cups will be offered by Messrs. H. H. Higginson and Courtland H. Smith for two races, viz: one for bona fide half-bred hunters and the other for thoroughbreds.

Mr. Higginson has joined forces with Mr. Smith and hereafter will winter his pack of imported English hounds, hunters and steeplechase at the Cameron Run Club, and another winter will see four days a week of good hunting under the joint mastership of Messrs. Higginson and Smith, the latter having also purchased a pack of imported hounds, which he will exhibit at the show.

QUEEN VICTORIA'S HAIR.

Its Great Profusion Was Always a Cause of Wonder.

Even at the age of 80 years, Queen Victoria's hair was a marvel of luxuriance. The court physician, following Professor Unna's discovery, undoubtedly treated Her Majesty's scalp with a germ destroying remedy, and it was not made public. It is now known, however, that the remedy for dandruff, the germ destroying element, is embodied in Newbro's Herpicide, the only hair preparation on the market that does destroy the dandruff germ, and that dandruff, hair will grow again, profusely, and falling hair will be stopped. "Destroy the cause, you remove the effect." Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich. Owens and Minor, Drug Co., Special Agents.

ARTISTIC HOME OF VIRGINIA ARTIST

ARCH AND GATEWAY.

"Vaux Cleuse," the Home of Professor and Mrs. Andrews, One of Beauty and Interest.

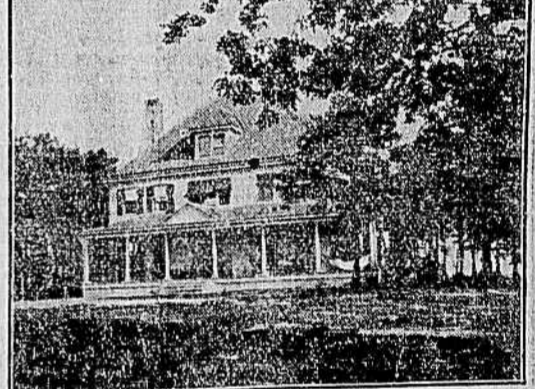

(Special Correspondence of The Times-Dispatch.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 7.—Between three or four miles from Alexandria, adjoining the grounds of the Theological Seminary, "Vauxcleuse," the Virginia home of Professor and Mrs. F. F. Andrews, is situated. To this place Professor and Mrs. Andrews came for rest after Professor Andrews resigned from the directorship of the Corcoran Gallery of Art, and where they are now most successfully working to redeem the land from the ravages of the Civil War and the injury of subsequent neglect. The property was before the war one of the well known Fairfax estates, belonging to Lord Fairfax, "Connie Cary," now Mrs. Burton Harrison, the well known authoress, spent her girlhood at the old "Vauxcleuse," she being descendant of the Fairfax family through Thomas Fairfax, who married a Miss Cary, and who was one of the first colonial Governors of Virginia.

The old Fairfax house, the park, forests and shrubbery were destroyed, and since then has been desolate until Professor Andrews bought it about two years ago. Very soon after his purchase, and after plans had been drawn by Mrs. Andrews for a new Vauxcleuse homestead, the family went abroad, and the house was built whilst they were gone, on a much prettier site than the old Fairfax house. The site of the old house, however, is still apparent, the large space made by digging for a foundation being still much in evidence. The place is famous for its natural beauty, and at this season of the year soft gleams of light are peeping through the trees and a sense of harmony makes itself felt. The air seeming indescribably sweet. No wonder Professor and Mrs. Andrews should desire to bring to such a beautiful place their two children—one a girl of seven and the other a boy of five—that they may learn, revel and grow strong in nature and its glowing revelations. After driving through a portion of the Theological Seminary grounds one passes unusual piece of work as a study from nature for her children. In the same hall is another artistic piece of her work, which is a portrait of Prof. Andrews and said to be an excellent likeness. This portrait hangs just over an antique table, which table is an heirloom of Prof. Andrews' family. I have no family heirlooms, said Mrs. Andrews, "they were all destroyed by the Yankees." As one of those to whom Mrs. Andrews was most kindly showing the treasure of her notable home was the widow of a Union officer. This little incident caused some amusement.

The new "Vauxcleuse," is heated by brother, Mr. Cuthbert Powell Minnegarde, is the assistant director of the Corcoran Gallery of Art. Most of her girlhood was spent in the neighborhood of her present Virginia home, "Vauxcleuse," where she is now rearing her children. Her Washington house, on Sixteenth Street, is handsome, and a picture of the house hangs in the library at Vauxcleuse.

Personally, Mrs. Andrews is most attractive, graceful in every movement, with great suavity of manner and a brilliant conversationalist. She is very engaging. Professor Andrews' picture of Martha Washington in the White House is an object of great interest, and few visitors leave the Executive Mansion without seeing it.

LIBRARY AT "VAUX CLEUSE," THE ANDREWS HOME.

through a beautiful archway, on which "Vauxcleuse" is inscribed. Then, arriving at the front entrance of the house, on the carriage steps, as one alights, is the word "Salva," thus assuring "wel come" in advance. Entering an immense hall, so much of interest meets one that it is difficult to describe. Perhaps the most noticeable is a mural dado of art, executed by Mrs. Andrews. From the front entrance to the foot of the stairway and again continuing up the stairway is a dado of paintings, done in alternate panels; first a panel of wild flowers and then a panel of moss green and the flowers in the first panel are tiger lilies, mullein, cardinal flower and ironwort. Adjoining this is a bird panel with birds upon branches of trees, among the red and brown, snow bird, thrush and jay bird. The snow bird is painted in a holly tree; cedar bird in a cedar tree and like arrangement all through.

Mrs. Andrews had intended to paint a dado in the dining and parlor and the wall and made a visit to town purchasing such material, but after purchasing thought how much prettier a mural wall would be although much more difficult to paint, she concluded, however, that to paint the ceiling it should be and at once commenced and has finished to the foot of the stairway.

Mrs. Andrews speaks of this beautiful open fires and in the parlor and library the handsome brass andirons would serve as a looking glass if such were needed. The cosy tea table, which Mrs. Andrews is given to serving her guests with a delicious cup of tea and small biscuits equally palatable has its place in the library, and the cups from which one sips are from Holland and shows real German decoration of red roses and large green leaves. Here in the library the windows are curtained with hand embroidered drapery of brilliant hues, giving a unique and picturesque appearance. On one of the low book-cases in the same room are several burnt-wood pictures of the interior of churches in Holland, which Mrs. Andrews executed whilst there.

Professor Andrews' studio adjoins the library, and the first thing that catches and holds the eye is the life size portrait of General Scott Shippe, president of the Virginia Military Institute. This portrait is to be presented to the Institute by gentlemen who at the time of the Civil War were cadets of the Virginia Military Institute, and who, under the leadership of General Shippe, fought so bravely and won the battle of New Market. It is said that these gentlemen still hold possession of the old Confederate coat, which General Shippe (now president of the Institute) wore at the time of the battle. The portrait speakingly represents the military hero. Tall, com-girl is very becoming, as is the large ruff around the boy's throat.

Professor Andrews is painting a portrait of Mrs. Randolph Tucker, widow of Judge Randolph Tucker, of Virginia, and mother of Dr. Henry St. George Tucker, present dean of Columbian University, Washington, D. C. This portrait is not yet completed, but is far enough so to be quickly recognized and appreciated by those who knew Mrs. Tucker, who is a cousin of Mrs. Andrews. The picture is to be presented by the artist to Mrs. Tucker. Dr. Tucker has seen it and is much pleased with it.

Mrs. Andrews clings to the old-time custom of employing colored servants, and has in her employ descendants of colored servants who have lived in her family for four generations. A little niece of a colored boy, who rejoices in the name of "Powell Fraser," is now representing the fourth generation of colored servants in Mrs. Andrews' family.

Mrs. Andrews' maiden name was Marietta Minnegarde, Richmond is her birthplace, where she is well known socially and professionally. She speaks with pleasant remembrance of a visit to Richmond two years ago, to the Richmond Art Club, to which she gave a course of water-color lessons. Her grandfather, Dr. Charles Minnegarde, was rector of St. Paul's Episcopal Church in Richmond for thirty-two years and her
